How Is It With The Atom?

Eighth grade students of Mrs. Nancy Jones (far left) were asked last week to "visualize" the atomic structure of various elements and to use any suitable materials to carry out the project. Result? Diane Smith, Jack Smith, Steve Weakley, Janice Gagneur and Phyllis Tweedy are holding "illustrated atoms", both mobile and stationary models constructed with marshmellows, rolled up chewing gum papers, foil, marbles, buttons, checkers, etc. Principal L. A. Beamon aided the project by handing some of the mobile models, with assistance from some student scientists who know that what goes up must come down. They were the "safety men" on that play by bracing the ladder so that his descent would be as uneventful as the "going up" to the project.

Students Seek To Explain Nature Of Matter

by Mrs. Nancy Jones, Instructor

Students in the Physical Science Classes at Appomattox Intermediate School have been involved in seeking to explain the nature of matter. They researched theories advanced by the Greeks, early scientists, including John Dalton, and later scientists such as J. J. Thomson, Lord Rutherford and Neils Bohr. This helped them establish a workable model of the adam.

Each student culminated his study by constructing a three dimensional model of an atom of any element. This activity enabled him to answer the following questions: Why do chemical reactions take place? Why do elements lose their original properties when they combine to form compounds? What determines the proportions of elements in compounds? How do you write formulas for compounds? How are chemical reactions different from nuclear reactions?

The projects which filled room 33 to overflowing capacity reflected creativity and ingenuity. Materials ran the gamut from styrofom balls, wire, and string to beans, buttons, coins, modeling clay (prepared & colored by students), vitamin pills, saccharine tablets, macaroni, marshmellows, checkers, match heads, cloth, aluminum foil, glitter, and marbles. There were almost as many different media as there were students.

Behavorial goals of observation, investigation, interpretation, research, critical study of conclusions were reached. No wonder the concepts were learned as a result of such individual involvement.

Newbill Family Outstanding

The Jack H. Newbill family of Wirtz, Virginia, has been cited as the "Outstanding Young Farm Family of the Year" in Southside Virginia.

The presentation of the area award of the Newbill family was a highlight of the 16th annual Area Young Farmer-Young Homemaker Convention Friday afternoon and evening at the King of the Sea Restaurant in Danville.

Newbill, 35, owns and operates a 534 acre dairy farm. An additional 12 acres are rented. Major enterprises include dairy cattle, corn, grain, sorghum, hay, and small grain.

The area winner studied vocational agriculture in high school. He earned a degree in dairy science at VPI. He has been a member of the Rocky Mount Young Farmer Association for twelve years and has held three Young Farmer offices.

The Snow Creek Association of Young Farmers was recognized for overall accomplishments.

Roger Barnhart of Rocky Mount was the area YF winner in corn growing.

First place in Farm and Home Safety went to the Dan River Association.

P. J. Myers, Chatham, was awarded honorary membership by the Young Farmers. This is the highest honor awarded by the YF organization.

Believes In Two-Wheel Safety

Who's that under the helmet? He's a motorcycle rider who learned to ride a "bike" — well, a few years ago. He still is of the opinion that two-wheels will get you there and back safely, when proper safety measures are observed. Since he didn't know his picture was being taken, it might not be fair to make positive identification! Readers can usually find him in Appomattox, however, carrying out ever so many civic duties (but usually not on a motorcycle.)

BETA CLUB

On Dec. 2, President Jimmy Chandler called the meeting of the Appomattox Co. High School Beta Club to order. Kay Paulette gave devotions and Dianne Williams, secretary, then called the roll and read the minutes of the last meeting. The club, then, elected three new officers from among the new members. These were Chaplain, Joan Coleman; Reporter, Pat Hudson; and Historian, Martha Harvey. Following these elections the club voted to participate in the Toys for Tots campaign for the Appomattox County area and discussed appearance on Klassroom Kwiz. After nominations for contestants for the game showwere completed, a program was given by the 5th period chorus class, directed by Mrs. Gibson. Pres.

Epilepsy — No Longer "Mystery" Malady

Epilepsy—last of the "hush-hush" physical disorders—has been largely controlled by medical science, but public misunderstanding of the affliction still hurts the epileptic in many ways, according to Charles O'Brien, executive director of the National Epilepsy League.

"So long as there are people who shun and fear the epileptic," said O'Brien, "he will face serious problems—even though the basic medical problem may no longer exist for him."

"For example, it was only a year ago that the last state which had laws forbidding epileptics to marry repealed that archaic legislation. School teachers, policemen, and other public officials have not been taught to recognize epilepsy for what it is—and, as a result, epileptic children have been needlessly placed in classrooms for the mentally retarded—and adults have been jailed, in error, for drunkeness," O'Brien said.
